About the park

Originally named Avenue House, the property was a gentlemen's residence and later, in the 1800's, was used as the headquarters for a gunpowder business. In 1879 Avenue House was remodelled and renamed Ewell Court. In 1907 further additions were made to the house and grounds.

The house was sold to the Council in 1935 and along with the grounds was used as a civil defence base for West Ewell in World War 2

In 2003, the Council decided to sell the building for residential development however local residents strongly opposed the decision and instead, the Council, in partnership with local residents groups, elected to revitalise Ewell Court House as a community facility, funded in part by the hire of its rooms for functions.
