About the Park	Shadbolt Park consists of 2 halves: 1 being a quiet and tranquil park with mature trees, the other being a playing field with playground and outdoor gym area. The park is also home to Shadbolt Park Doctor's Surgery and the Day Lily Garden, which houses the National Plant Collection of hemerocallis (day lilies)

History

Ernest Ifill Shadbolt purchased a plot of land in 1921 called Darkfields. Shadbolt began to lay out gardens around his newly built house, filling them with rare trees and shrubs from around the world. He also created a pond. After Shadbolt's death in 1937 the house and gardens were offered to the Council for the sum of £3500. Shadbolt Park was opened to the public after the Council acquired an extra quarter-acre to provide access from Edenfield gardens.

A library was opened in the house and this was later converted to a doctor's surgery.
